

Aim Artists

Antonella Tolot

Makeup + Body Painting + Grooming

To call Antonella Tolot a renaissance woman wouldn't even come close to encapsulating her essence as an artist. Being self-taught, Antonella's 25+ year career in make-up design began when she couldn't separate herself from her art supplies at just three years old, and is only rivaled by her expertise in fine and living art. Antonella transforms models into astonishing works of art channeling artists such as Pablo Picasso and Amedeo Modigliani, and over the years has honed her skills as a make-up artist by working with celebrities ranging from Elizabeth Taylor to Robin Williams. In addition, Antonella has lent her art to photographers such as Annie Leibovitz, Helmut Newton, and director Tarsem Singh for his timeless music video for R.E.M.'s hit song "Losing My Religion."

Antonella's spontaneous and whimsical nature for work has been featured in high fashion magazines and advertising for the likes of Vogue, Vanity Fair, Rolling Stone, Entertainment Weekly, Esquire, Seventeen, and Glamour.

Antonella was born and raised in Italy and Canada, then brought her home country's culture and taste for art to America with her in her early teens. With over 25 years of experience in professional makeup design in Hollywood and beyond, Antonella has amassed a body of art that is sure to impress. Antonella's other passions include design, fashion, decorating, knitting, wood working, drawing, horses, art therapy and classic films. She currently resides in Montreal and is learning French! Union member 706